through. Among the lines drawn were:
First, the church must have more profound spirituality. In another than a spiritual sense it may be said, like people like priest. Then there must become prevalent a deep conviction that the call to the ministry is directly and decidedly from God, and that it is Christ's exclusive prerogative privilege to call and send by movement of the Holy Spirit. None should enter the ministry who felt that they can stay out of it, and if the church would have the proper sort of ministers he must pray for them. The supply of ministers is not a matter of market measuring; the cry of too many ministers is preposterous. This is a matter of God's law, not of arithmetic. Short cuts to the ministry should be stopped; they lead to short stops. The speaker argued that presbyteries should adopt means for securing the best material and the best facilities for its development; should make taking a candidate for the ministry under care, not a form, but an actiful of earnest meaning. The college connected with the church should be thoroughly efficient, and for those candidates who exthe list of merenant the list of merenant the ministry under care, not a form, but an act full of earnest meaning. Mr. Henry Hotter, assistant secretary of the cotton exchange, took a flying trip lately to Evansville, Indiana. Wednesday he returned, but not as he went. A fair bride, see Emma E. Bollinger, formerly of this city, accompanied him. Mr. Hotter has been so faithful in the performance of his duties, and so courteous to all who had business with him, that it was thought by the members of the exchange no more than right that he should, at this momentous epoch in his life, be given a substantial testimonial of their regard. So, when the exchange was called to order yesterday by Secretary Gates, Mr. Robert Wolfenden, of the firm of Watson & Hill, Liverpool, came forward, a id, in the name of the many friends of Mr. Hotter in the exchange, presented him with a purse of $325 in gold. Mr. Hotter, although considerably taken aback by the unexpected token, responded in a neat speech of thanks, and thus concluded one of the handsomest and best deserved presentations that has taken place in our city for years past. Outsiders, as well as members of the exchange, owe something to Mr. Hotter for the obligations he has placed them under, and in their behalf the APPEAL tenders sincerest wishes for the long life and happiness of himself and the lovely life companion he has chosen,
